How To Enhance Your Treatment Experience

- You'll feel more comfortable if you don't eat for two hours before your session.
- Draping will be employed.
- Let your therapist know if you have any medical or physical conditions that might contraindicate certain types of treatment.
- Remove any unnecessary jewelry that could cause scratching or interfere with having a smooth massage.
- If you wear glasses or contact lenses, consider removing them. It may add to your relaxing experience.
- If you're concerned about getting oil on your hair, inform your therapist. You won't want to miss out on a scalp massage!
- Quieting yourself will allow you to tune in to your experience and relax more deeply. Do give your therapist feedback regarding your experience and feel free to ask any questions you'd like.
- Breathe deeply and regularly, stressing your exhalation. Imagine your body becoming heavy and sinking into the table or mat. As the therapist locates areas of tension, consciously allow yourself to breath and relax into those areas.

Sometimes during a massage or other type of treatment emotions will surface. It may be of great benefit to release and work through them if you feel comfortable doing so.

Massage Therapy
Client's Bill of Rights
And Client Responsibilities

1. The client understands that he or she will be covered during the session and only the areas that are treated will be uncovered during treatment. The covering may consist of sheets or towels as appropriate for the treatment being provided.
2. The client should expect to be touched in a respectful, caring, gentle, and effectual manner.
3. The client agrees to treat the therapist in a respectful and professional manner at all times.
4. The client agrees to be prepared for the treatment with good personal hygiene.
5. The therapist will explain in general terms the planned procedure for achieving the intent of the session and will answer any and all specific questions the client has.
6. The client understands that their health is a function of their participation and they are responsible for communicating to the therapist during the treatment any pains, questions, concerns and changes in their condition so, that the treatment benefits will be maximized.
7. The client understands that emotional and psychological issues may be stirred-up in the normal course of a massage session and the massage therapist is not a psychologist or able to perform psychological counseling with the client. The therapist is trained to be empathetic, compassionate and supportive in the therapeutic process.
8. The client has the right to terminate the massage at any time for any reason.
9. The client has the right to be informed about the cost of the treatment prior to the treatment.
10. The client can expect total confidentiality with regard to their professional interactions with the therapist; although they are encouraged to share their experiences about massage with anyone.
